July 26, 1959: suffrage in the thirtieth day

Summary in the parish Liber Chronicus

July 26, 1959. Guided by a sense of Christian brotherhood and animated by a profound sorrow and spirit of suffrage, religious and civil Authorities and people gathered in the church to commemorate the sad date, and to elevate once again, with a magnificent ceremony in suffrage, a prayer of propitiation for the soul of those that fatality wanted to be victims of such terrible misfortune. Large was the participation of the relatives of the victims.

Summary in the parish bulletin

Remembrance of a thirtieth day anniversary. July 26, 1959. Guided by a sense of Christian brotherhood and animated by a profound sorrow and spirit of suffrage, religious and civil Authorities and people gathered in the church to commemorate the sad date, and to elevate once again, with a magnificent ceremony in suffrage, a prayer of propitiation for the soul of those that fatality wanted to be victims of such terrible misfortune. Large was the participation of the relatives of the victims. As eruditely introduced by the Very Rev. Parish Priest during the appropriate funeral oration held on that occasion, Death, God's great mystery, gives those who perished the life that will never end, and at the same time makes us feel always close to the missing loved ones who are guiding us in our needs. Will our Christian remembrance keep on, and will our prayer arise spontaneously from the hearth whenever we will pass by the place where the terrible disgrace occurred.
